GENERAL BODY CARE

It is generally claimed that "Beauty must give the sensitive beholder utmost satisfaction merely its existence". In other words beauty is what appears to a beholder a perfect symmetry merely on a casual viewing. If you are a well-blossomed rose it must thrill you; must give you a sense of exhilaration, a share of fulfillment. So it means beauty is the overall appearance of a perfect symmetry. With reference to physical beauty it can be said that all organs of a body must appear symmetrical and homogenous with other limbs. If you have a very comely physique but not beautiful features, the over all impact may not be as domineering as it might be with your having sharp or captivating features as well. And even if you don't have very bright complexion but your body and features fall in a symmetrical poise you might have many onlookers falling for you. So the quintessence of beauty is symmetry. That is why in this part, of our course, we shall be devoting our attention to individual limbs in order to develop a cohesive symmetry among them. Although the basic 'reflectors' of physical beauty, particularly of a female figure have been dealt seperately in the coming pages, yet, while discussing the overall impact of beauty those ponits will also be touched upon briefly.

So, starting from the physical aspect of beauty what strikes first is hair. Well kept, lustrous and glowing hair are the most vital asset of a female figure.

Hair

Although enough details have been given in the third of course, here we would lay emphasis on your selection of
